

Protect our bees

It is extremely important for everyone to know that a third of the world's food production depends on bees. This proves how important bees are to our daily lives. However, bees and other insects are increasingly under threat due to human activities. These activities involve habitat loss, changes in weather patterns and excessive use of agrochemicals such as pesticides. Therefore, in the long term the decreasing number of bees will affect our lives greatly! For this reason, it is imperative that we all work together to protect our bees.
